

How To Watch Jake Paul vs Julio César Chávez Jr. In California TV

17 seconds ago — How to watch Jake Paul vs Chavez Jr Fight: TV channel and live stream for boxing today

Jake Paul will make his return to the boxing ring tonight, meeting former world champion Julio Cesar Chavez Jr in California.

The YouTuber-turned-fighter easily defeated a 58-year-old Mike Tyson, 31 years his senior, in his last bout in Texas in November on Netflix.

Despite beating the former heavyweight champion, the age difference between the pair meant the win did precious little for Paul's reputation.

To triumph over Chavez Jr, though, could do plenty for Paul's boxing credibility.

The former WBC middleweight champion, now 39, has a career record of 54-1-6, and has fought across a range of weight classes.

Paul is unsurprisingly confident ahead of the fight, telling DAZN that he expected to “embarrass” Chavez Jr, son of legendary former world champion Julio Cesar Chavez Sr.

Paul said: “Knockout early rounds, it’s easy. I, Jake Joseph Paul, will knock out Julio Cesar Chavez, Saturday June 28. I will embarrass him, and I will defeat him.”

It could be the toughest test of Paul’s short career to date, and whether he can deliver on that promise is in some doubt.

He is set to be at cruiserweight for the bout, claiming he will be ranked by both the WBA and WBC if he impresses at Honda Center in Anaheim.

How to watch Jake Paul vs Chavez Jr

TV channel and live stream: The fight will be available on DAZN on a pay-per-view basis, at a cost of £24.99 in the UK. A bundle package, which comes with Oleksandr Usyk vs Daniel Dubois II as a secondary option, is available for £39.99.

Ring walks for the main event are expected at around 4am BST in the early hours of Sunday morning, which is 11pm ET and 8pm PT on Saturday night in the US.