

!!+[TODAY@!]* Ireland U20 v Georgia U20 Live STreams World U20 Rugby Championship - June 29, 2025

Ireland U20 are set to face a physical and determined Georgia U20 side in what promises to be a key clash in the pool stages of the World Rugby U20 Championship. Both teams will be hungry to stamp their authority and gain valuable tournament points as they chase a spot in the knockout stages. While Ireland are favourites on paper, Georgia's forward power and gritty style make them a tough challenge for any opposition.

Ireland U20: Precision and Pace

Ireland's U20s come into the tournament with high expectations following a strong Six Nations campaign earlier this year. Coached by Richie Murphy, the team plays a fast, structured game built around a dynamic pack and a backline full of attacking intent. Fly-half Jack Murphy and scrum-half Oliver Coffey form a reliable half-back pairing capable of controlling tempo and unleashing threats out wide.

Players like Hugh Gavin and Danny Sheahan have impressed with their work rate and physicality, while full-back Ben O'Connor is a constant danger with ball in hand. Ireland will aim to set the tone early, moving the ball quickly to exploit gaps and maintain relentless pressure.

Georgia U20: Grit, Power, and Passion

Georgia U20 continue to earn respect on the world stage thanks to their dominant forward pack and improving all-round game. Traditionally known for their scrummaging and mauling ability, the Junior Lelos are now adding depth to their attacking structure, with more confidence in spreading the ball when opportunities arise.

Captain Luka Tsirekidze leads a determined unit that thrives in tight, physical contests. For Georgia, success will depend on winning the collisions, slowing Ireland's ruck ball, and keeping errors to a minimum.

Key Matchup & Prediction

The battle at the breakdown will be crucial. Ireland's ability to generate quick ball is key to their expansive style, but if Georgia can disrupt the flow and slow the game down, they'll make life uncomfortable for the Irish side.

Prediction: Georgia will bring fire and intensity, but Ireland's superior cohesion and pace should see them pull away in the second half.

Verdict: Ireland U20 to win by 12 points, with a late flourish securing the result.
